

Biobank refusal for Central Finland Biobank

With this form, you can withdraw your consent given to the biobank and/or object to the processing of your samples and data in the biobank after the sample has been collected. You may also proactively prohibit the use of your samples and data in biobank research. Please see the biobank information leaflet for sample donors for more information on withdrawing biobank consent and exercising the right to object. Please note that the biobank interprets the withdrawal of consent as also including the exercise of the right to object.

The refusal will take effect once Central Finland Biobank has received the signed form. After this, your samples and data will no longer be used and no access to them will be granted for further research purposes. Once the refusal comes into effect, samples held by the biobank will be disposed of and all the data, as a rule, erased (except for the details of the refusal itself), including any data on your state of health that may have been analysed from your biobank sample.
